

Reflection

Hi, my name is Jewell Washington and my group was the hooked up Developers. My other group members included ayanna, jared, gina, and jared. Our project for this semester was to recreate a client's website so that it looked more modern and up to date. Our client was the Jacksonville Museum of Military History.

To start off I am very happy with the group I had. Everyone was amazing. I know for me that working with an actual client was kind of nerve racking. I guess it was the fact that it was a real person outside of school and not one of my professors. But that's nor here nor there, let's get into the team itself.

Ayanna was our team's leader. She did an excellent even with some of the obstacles we had along the way. She was very professional and treated the client very nice. She was very organized and made sure to keep on the team on track.

Jared was responsible for designed aspects of the project, mostly for the logo redesign. He did an excellent job on all the different logos he made. He also helped any member of the team that needed it.

Ryan had the responsibility of the back in portion as well as design. He was amazing to work with. He worked a lot of the time so sometimes he missed team meetings but we made sure to let him know what he missed.

He was very friendly and helpful. He picked slack when needed be and helped the team with solutions to little problems we had.

Gina had a part in a little bit of everything. She helped work on some of the designs on the different logos. She also helped ryan on the back end portion of the website like for example making sure the website worked properly. She wasn't really a good group member at all. We had a lot of problems with her from the beginning of the project. She went off subject a lot, tried to take over ayanna job, made side comments to some of her group members that seemed a little racist and lastly acting as if she was better than us.

Lastly, is me, I did most of the design aspect of the project. I worked to make colors and fonts good and also added content where needed. I helped any member that needed it.

I would say the most difficult part of the project was getting the client to like the logos we made and getting everyone on the same page. The best way we dealt with this was by letting the client know what we had come up with and letting them choose what satisfied them.

I learned by working with a group that people are good at different things. Everyone has different opinions on how to do things and sometimes you have to compromise. You have to work together. You might not like a member in your group but you have to suck it up and just get through it.

Overall the experience was amazing. I am happy to have done this project with these amazing people.
